Step 3 Tell us about your application

Type of application

Most applications will be processed as 'on notice', which gives the defendant a chance to respond. If your application is urgent, for example in cases of ongoing serious emotional distress, your application can be processed 'without notice', where the defendant doesn't have a chance to respond unless the court says otherwise.
This application is on notice without notice
What orders do you want the court to change or remove Tick which orders are you applying for the court to make
a) change the duration of your order
b) change the conditions of your order
C) remove the order
To support your application please provide details of what you want the court to do and a short summary for why you want an order changed or removed. For example, you could be applying to change the duration of your order because you need more time. Please keep this brief.

Step 4 Tell us why you want to change or remove an order

For this step you will need to provide an 'affidavit'. An affidavit contains the written evidence that you want to present, so you will need to swear or affirm that what you write is true. (To swear is to make a religious promise; to affirm is to make a non-religious promise.) You can do this at your local District or High Court (court registrar) or with a Justice of the Peace or lawyer.

Who can make an affidavit?

An affidavit can be written by you or another representative who has knowledge of the relevant facts and contains enough information for the court to consider if a harmful digital communications order should change or be removed.

You can include more than one affidavit – just copy the following pages as many times as you need. If you need more room you can also attach extra pages

Will the defendant see this affidavit?

If your application is filed 'on notice', then the defendant and any other people you want the harmful digital communications order to cover, will see your affidavit.

If your application is filed 'without notice', then the defendant and any other people you want the harmful digital communications order to cover, will not see your affidavit. You will need to provide reasons in your affidavit for why you are making a without notice application.

Supporting documents

If you have any supporting documents ('exhibits'), they can be attached to this affidavit. An example would be evidence of the communication e.g. emails or text's.

Take the original documents and copies with you when you go to swear or affirm your affidavit. A Deputy Registrar of a court, Justice of the Peace or lawyer will check that the copy matches the original and then sign the copy.

Attach the signed copy to your affidavit

Step 6 Send in your application to your local District Court

You may deliver or send your application in the following ways:

- 1. Hand your application
- 2. Send your application by post
- 3. Email your application to your local district court

If you hand-in or post your application, please give us a copy for every person the application involves.

Contact details for your local court can be found on the Ministry of Justice Website at justice.govt.nz/contact-us/find-us/ or in the blue government pages at the front of the phonebook

What happens next?

A Registrar or Judge will look at your application.

- If they don't accept your application you will be told why
- If your 'on notice' application is accepted, you will receive a letter or email to confirm a hearing date and time for the application. You will be able to speak in person about your application and the defendant will also get a chance to speak. If you have a lawyer, they can come with you or attend on your behalf. The judge will then decide if the orders should be granted.
- If your 'without notice' application is accepted, the judge will decide, without hearing from the defendant, if one or more of the orders should be granted. You will be sent a letter or email with their decision.
