Your rights

SETTING ASIDE REGISTRATION

If the judgment should not have been registered in New Zealand under the Trans-Tasman Proceedings Act 2010 (NZ), you may be able to have the registration set aside by applying to the [name of New Zealand court in which judgment is registered].

The Act sets out limited grounds on which registration of a judgment may be set aside.

You must make an application for registration to be set aside within 30 working days after the day on which you were given this notice.

If you think the registration should be set aside, you should get legal advice as soon as possible.

STAY OF ENFORCEMENT

If you intend to apply to the [name of Australian court or tribunal]

to set aside, vary, or appeal against the judgment, you may apply for an order that enforcement of the registered judgment in New Zealand not be commenced until a specified time or event, or be stayed (put on hold) for a specified period.

An application for an order of that kind must be made within 30 working days after the day on which you were given this notice.

If you think enforcement of the judgment should not commence or should be stayed, you should get legal advice as soon as possible.

Failure to comply with judgment

If you fail to comply with the judgment:

- if the judgment is one under which a sum of money is payable, further interest may accrue on any amount owing.
- you may, if a proceeding is commenced in a New Zealand court for enforcement of it, be required to pay the costs incurred by or on behalf of the entitled person in attempting to enforce it.
